Introduction

COHRE first published a bibliography of housing rights in 1993, at a time when the right to adequate housing, although enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948 and reaffirmed in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in 1966, began finally to be recognised on the international scene as a fundamental human right. Since that time attention to the promotion and protection of the right to adequate housing has grown substantially. This comprehensively updated bibliography reflects that growth and includes hundreds of new and valuable sources of information. The bibliography and the sources listed within are an essential tool for persons working in the field of housing rights at the international, regional, or national level.

This second edition of Sources No. 2 includes information on the right to adequate housing generally and on specific areas such as forced evictions and displacement; housing and property restitution; women's rights to adequate housing; implementing and enforcing housing rights; and economic, social and cultural rights. Most of the above categories include sources from professional research; non-governmental organisation (NGO) and government publications, fact-finding mission reports, and United Nations documents and resolutions.

Sources 2 seeks to provide an overview of the information available dealing with housing rights and forced evictions, with a view to expanding access to this literature. While numerous issues arise within the context of housing rights, the sources included are limited to documents that have attempted to relate their analysis to the framework of housing as a human right and represent what we consider to offer the most important contributions to the literature in their relevant areas. Thus, documents on issues such as homelessness, human rights, low-income housing, human settlements and displacement are only included in this publication if they deal either explicitly or implicitly with housing as a human right.

In addition to materials dealing with housing rights and forced evictions, this document also outlines some key publications analysing the nature and intent of economic, social and cultural rights. An understanding of these rights, and their interdependency and indivisibility with civil and political rights, will be requisite in grasping the practical potential of housing rights, and how to most effectively utilize legal resources with an end to improving housing and living conditions throughout the world.

This publication does not purport to be exhaustive in its coverage, and suggestions for additional sources to be included in subsequent editions are appreciated. Although this compilation contains mostly English language sources, COHRE is interested in receiving information on relevant sources in any language. Outdated and unpublished sources, as well as materials once issued by now defunct organisations, have not been included unless they are readily available.

Finally, I would like to thank Bret Thiele, COHRE's Legal Officer, for his assistance in compiling this list of resources. We would also like to thank the Ford Foundation and the Department for International Development (DFID) for their generous support in the production of this document.

The Centre on Housing Rights and Evictions (COHRE) undertakes a wide variety of activities supporting the full realization of housing rights for everyone, everywhere.

COHRE actively campaigns against forced evictions wherever they occur or are planned, and views forced evictions as a gross violation of a range of human rights, in particular the right to adequate housing.

This publication contains a number of resources on the human right to adequate housing; forced eviction and displacement; housing and property restitution; women's rights to adequate housing; implementing and enforcing the right to adequate housing; and economic, social and cultural rights.

This bibliography seeks to provide an overview of the information available dealing with housing rights and forced evictions, with a view to expanding access to these important resources.
